1935

Foreword

THOSE years spent in college are significant in the life of any individual. They serve the student as do the beacon lights along the rocky coast serve the captain of a tossing vessel—pointing the way to a life mingled with hardships and pleasures and enabling him to select the best and discard the rest.

One's college years are the time for making new and lasting friendships; the time for broadening one's intellectual and spiritual horizon; and the time for strengthening character and developing personality.

Realizing that the chief value of any yearbook is to enable the individual to live again his college experiences and to recall old acquaintances, we have endeavored to make THE 1935 CATAMOUNT a true reflection of Western Carolina Teacher's College as it has been during 1934-1935.

To the faculty and students of Western Carolina Teacher's College, we submit this, our third annual yearbook. If it will only serve to bring, in later years, some small amount of pleasure, our efforts will be rewarded.

We, the Staff of THE CATAMOUNT for 1935, and patiently labored in the service of Western Carolina Teacher's College that her graduates might be inspired to higher and nobler ways of life, and whose philosophy has been exemplified in his performance of life's daily tasks. As a token of our respect and esteem we dedicate this volume to
